FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITOL

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON Feb 12 1873

Less than three weeks remain of the session and the Washington papers seem to be a unit upon one thing According to them it is very important that a special or extra session of the next Congress shall be held immediately after the 4th of March This is a matter the Washington papers can always agree upon, at midsummer as well as midwinter It is always necessary—for Washington—that the flags should be flying over the wings of the Capitol, as they invariably do during the hours when the houses are in session If you see the flag up over the Senate wing, you know thereby that the grave and reverend seignieurs are in consultation, studying the art of "how not to do it" If you see the glorious emblem fluttering its folds and bare over the House wing, you know as a consequence that the wrangle still goes on and that the Honorable Speaker has his hands full and overflowing with the labor of keeping the menagerie in something like order Washington lives and thrives when Congress is in session, for the lobby is here, the constituents come to look on,—it is a season of festival and social deluge are gay, so, of course, there is not a newspaper in the city that does not really believe in the necessity for Congress to sit, and for the hotels and boarding houses and stores and newspaper offices to do a good trade But for all that, don't you put faith in an extra session The majority want to finish up and go home, and they will from now on keep at work as if they were on the home stretch

COLFAX EXPLAINS

It will not be possible for any one who ever had faith in Schuyler Colfax as a man, to give credit to the charges made against him, of having held Credit Mobilier stock, after the explanation he made yesterday He is the most perjured man in America, or else he had none of its dividends That he did agree to take the stock and then declined to receive it, is his own statement It is possible that some error in Oakes Ames' memoranda and fault of memory on his part may have existed We can never hope for any further developments, and it stands at present as a square issue of veracity between Ames and Colfax, and the nation will assert its faith in Colfax

POMEROY IN MAID'S INVISIBLE SITUATION

On appearing in his seat in the Senate yesterday, Senator Pomeroy made an instant demand for a committee to investigate the charges against him in connection with the recent Senatorial election in Kansas, specifically denying all the charges so made The committee appointed consists of several of the most reliable Senators, whose fairness and disinterestedness cannot be called in question So we may look for a fair investigation It is difficult to believe that as foul a conspiracy as he claims was put in operation to defeat his rein, but Kansas is a remarkable country Senator Caldwell will hold his seat The evidence against him seemed for a while overwhelming, but he meets it with a statement that has a fair and creditable look, and the general sentiment in relation to his case has greatly changed since that statement was made. Pomeroy has gained somewhat by taking the lead in demanding investigation, and the general verdict will have to be suspended until the investigation has been fairly had, as he desires.

WASHINGTON AS A LECTURE FIELD.

This city is placarded each day for one or more lectures, from more or less distinguished men and women Among the rest we have had several the past week from Gen E L Applegate. I attended his lecture on "Woman—the Unsettled Question," which was delivered on Friday evening to an audience of about two hundred. He was well advertised before hand and should have commanded a good hearing, but lecturers must come to Washington with reputations, not after them The Washingtonians won't trust their own judgments, but a lecturer must bring a perfected renown with him That lecture on "Woman" took well, and if there had been an audience of a thousand the house would have rattled with continued applause Well, the next morning the papers had various criticisms One said harsh things, and criticised Elisha for having the very unpolished style and original and peculiar traits it had heralded before as natural to him, another said the lecture was good and that the audience was enthusiastic I did not attend on the next evening, but learn that the General opened his lecture by unveiling a few staccato sentences at the reporter who had treated him discourteously The consequence was that the local let his quill loose and the next morning we had a highly sensational account of "Applegate the prairie flower," his gestures, his gait, his pronunciation and the way he treated "Mohammed" The article was decidedly vicious, and I am afraid the consequences will be terrible, for the General threatens to abandon his intended programme and go out West and commence a crusade against the national capital and in favor of his removal west of the Mississippi If these fellows don't appreciate "Mohammed" we must treat them like Arabs, he says, and reduce this poverty stricken place of earth to its native barrenness and let them root in the poor soil that will hardly ripen a blade of grass, instead of fatten on rich treasury pastures The comparison to Arabs is fortunate, because he insists that what they wanted was "backsheesh," and as he wouldn't "potlatch" they went for him. Oregon certainly has to revenge her favorite son, and the surest way to do it is to raise the mighty West for another crusade, with the cry that "Westward the seat of empire" must go, and let these Eastern wilds resolve back into their desert state

The most unkindest cut of all was, that as Gen Applegate went to the hall he was met at the entrance by a ragged, dirty little devil, who rushed up and offered to sell him a complimentary ticket at half price You see it was this way Complimentary tickets were sent to the President, Cabinet, several distinguished M C's, and to a few Odd Fellows Now the question is, Which of these put the tickets into the market at half price? I hope it wasn't Grant, because just at this time, when they talk of raising his salary to $50,000 per annum I don't like to believe such a thing of him Times are hard, and this cold winter is bitter on the poor, I am afraid it was some Congressman who can't live on $5,000 per annum and mileage, and wasn't considered worth a subsidy of Credit Mobilier stock What do they send such fellows to Congress for?

ABOUT ORATORY

The subject of "Oratory" was ably handled in the lecture room here a few evenings since by Mr. Dogherty, a legal gentleman from Philadelphia, who has acquired quite a platform reputation His treatment of it was alternately grave, gay and humorous, and at times he was both classical and eloquent He closed with an allusion to the decline of oratory in our day, and attributed that decline to the fact that individual power over the popular mind no longer can exist when the press is the great lever to create and maintain public opinion With the increase of the power of the press the minds of men are indianced so that the pen of a popular editor has more potence than the thrilling words of the most popular orator Dogherty insists, that at the present day the pulpit offers the finest field for oratory He had the independence, here, in the Capital city of the Republic, to boldly criticise the character of our public men, and to urge the necessity of establishing political purity and putting an end to corruption.

INAUGURATION DAY

The second inauguration of President Grant is to be celebrated with imposing display, and the city papers are debating if they shall follow it with a season of carnival The worthy burghers of the National Capital feel something as did the lords of Rome in their time, that it is necessary to amuse the people, but it must be remembered that they expect to reap a harvest every time they give a show Preparations for Inauguration go steadily forward, and no doubt it will be a most brilliant and distinguished affair

STATE SOCIABLES

The most popular social gatherings of the national Capital are the so called "State sociables" State associations exist here, and they have great social gatherings where they dance and have a good time generally President Grant occasionally attends them and they call out large and fashionable assemblies There are several of these every week during January and February, and they constute a distinct feature of the social engagements of Washington

IN CONCLUSION

A bill has passed the Senate, which was introduced by Senator Corbett, relieving Mr Warren, Register at the Land Office at Oregon City, of $2 000 that he paid on a warrant of one Gilson I think, acting Secretary of Idaho which wasn't right, because that gentleman gathered together about $ 10,000 of Uncle Samuel's money and took it away to parts unknown For a long time the Department refused to allow the account but it will probably pass the House and then the same can be charged to profit and loss

Congress has repealed the franking privilege, and now wants to find out how public documents are to be distributed—a very important question That clean sweep of the franking privilege was a very magnanimous thing to do, but they quite overdid it, and will have to arrange for the carrying of many things through the mails free or else they can hang some of the Departments up to dry and call them played out The franking privilege was both an evil and a necessity, and discrimination at that time would have saved legislation now

The House is now holding evening sessions, and both Houses will have to work lively to carry through the most necessary work in hand

The salary bill cannot pass, I venture to predict, at present figures Cabinet officers and Judges of Supreme Court ought to have $10,000 per annum, for they have to exercise liberal hospitality Fifty thousand a year is too much for the President, and Congressmen cannot afford to pay themselves $8 000 a year

The new postage law that has passed the House reduces letter postage to two cents, and requires that newspaper postage shall be prepaid at the office of publication That last is a nice thing for offices that don't require prepayment of subscription When that passes, and becomes a law in January next, we shall all have to exact prepayment for the same reason that the La Grande merchant could not sell needles on credit Said he "It teh no vot do goote cost, but we must have de cash monish for de freight" After all, it will be a splendid excuse to demand cash in advance, and so will prove useful even to publishers

OREGON

The United Presbyterian Church at Albany received nine new members into full connection last Sunday

Mr D McLeod, another pioneer of Washington county, died at his residence near Gaston in that county on the 26th ult

There were filed for record in Washington county during the month of February 50 deeds and 9 mortgages Three marriage licenses were issued in the county during the same time

Mr. C O Barnes, of Albany, has been sued for $10,000 damages on the charge of having cruelly beaten and internally injured a boy who was some time ago in his employ The suit is commenced by the boy's guardian, Mr Smelser.

Here is the benefits of advertising. Dr. Plummer on Wednesday of last week handed the Democrat an ad. for white tailed deer, and on Thursday, before the paper went to press, he had already heard of several herds of them which were wandering among the foothills of the Cascade Mountains waiting to be taken in out of the snow.

Our Hillsboro correspondent says the road Supervisors of Washington county are going right ahead in the matter of opening and improving the roads in many districts In Forest Grove precinct Mr Porter is moving with very commendable diligence in the matter, and proposes to have all the ways in his district in a good traveling condition. Others are also making arrangements to follow his good example

The Albany Register says "At the last meeting of the Oak Creek Farmers' Club it was resolved to build a warehouse at Astoria, and to that end a resolution passed requesting the different clubs throughout the county to send each one member, the whole number thus selected to meet in this city on Thursday (yesterday) and draw up articles of incorporation forming a company for such purpose, fixing the amount of stock, amount of each share, etc

The following appointments have been made by Governor Grover Edward J Jones, Commissioner of Deeds for Oregon, to reside at Boston, James W Cassady, Commissioner of Deeds, to reside at Camden, N J, J H Tongue, of Hillsboro, and J R Ellison, of Oakland, Notaries Public J N T Miller, of Jackson county, has been commissioned Commissary General of the Militia of the State of Oregon, with the rank of Colonel

The Statesman of Friday says "There was something of a breeze in town yesterday in consequence of a rumor that certain parties were about to make application for an injunction to restrain the State Treasurer from paying any warrants drawn on him on account of expenditures by the Capitol Commissioners It was said that the parties in question were pledged to furnish $1,000 to pay the expenses of the preliminary proceedings. We heard such talk, but counted it as idle, for the reason that we do not think the parties have interest enough either way to expend a thousand dollars"

The Mercury says "Hubbard is a pleasant little village on the line of the Oregon and California Railroad, about 21 miles north of this city. It boasts of three stores, a blacksmith shop, depot buildings, private residences, etc, and its people are enterprising They are very desirous the town should improve, and express a willingness to offer any and every inducement to people desirous of settling in their neighborhood to locate in the immediate vicinity of the town They offer lumber and a lot to any religious denomination that will build a church and supply them with a minister, and from the fact that the only attempt that has yet been made to sell intoxicating beverages in the place has proven a miserable failure through the want of support, we would judge a minister would find no little encouragement with the people A public hall for the free use of everybody is also one of the attractions It is owned by Mr A Wessel, and was erected by him for the object stated—that there might be a place for public gatherings without expense"

The New York Herald wants to know why His Holiness, Pius IX, does not decide to make the new world his home It says it "foresaw the fall of the temporal Power; and it is useless to deny that since the fall of the temporal Power the Pope might as well have his headquarters in New York or Baltimore as in Rome, His empire is now purely spiritual, cogitates the Herald The question is where the headquarters of this spiritual power should be established "War on the North American continent is scarcely a possibility" 'Europe is lapsing into chaos!' We are rich enough and willing enough to provide the Holy Father with a peaceful and quiet home We promise him a grand reception, a reception such as was never given anywhere to mortal man, In the midst of us he would find rest and peace. His arrival on these shores would most certainly mark a new and happy departure in the history of the Papacy"

Certainly this invitation is lacking in none of the elements of cordiality

WASHINGTON Feb 27—In the Senate Logan presented the credentials of Oglesby, Senator elect from Illinois

At 10 30 P M Morrill of Maine submitted the report of the Senate Credit Mobilier Committee, with the following resolution

Resolved, That James W Patterson be and is hereby expelled from his seat as a member of the Senate.

The report presents facts ascertained touching each particular in the case of Logan in any sense Roscoe Conkling was in no way implicated The report is unanimous The committee consists of Merrill of Maine, Chairman Scott and Wright, Republicans and Stockton and Steven on Democrats

Washington Feb 28—The debate on the Louisiana question was still going on at 2.10 this morning motion to adjourn being lost.

The President has signed the bill to allow the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to build a bridge across the St Louis river between Minn's Point, Minnesota, and Connor's Point Wisconsin

The appropriation bills, it is conceded are in a fair way to be passed and can be finished in three days

The fishery bill has passed both Houses, and with the bill passed in the Senate last night the House can dispose of it in a day and business will be finished by Tuesday

The most important measure will be the Louisiana matter, unless the President has already notified Congress what action he will take with regard thereto no effort will be made towards settling troubles in that State

The deficiency appropriation bill, as reported, contains $50 000 for the Ouray City mint and $100 000 each, for Indian service in Colorado, Nevada and Utah.

The name of Wm Thurman is the only one yet publicly mention here for suit Treasurer vice Bolton.

Chicago, Feb 28 —A Washington special says the report of the Senate Credit Mobilier Committee last night was totally unexpected, and that it created a profound sensation on the floor of the Senate and in the gallery While Morton was speaking on the Louisiana question, Morrill of Maine Chairman of the Committee asked him to allow him to submit its report. It was sent to the Clerk's desk and an order to print was made Some Senator asked if the report was accompanied by a resolution Morrill replied in the affirmative Every who occupied the Chair, directed it to be read Several Senators asked Morton in an undertone to proceed with his speech but Morton asked the Clerk to read the resolution which he did Morton then went on with his speech but no one longer listened to him In an instant after the resolution had been read, Senators with solemn faces were gathered in knots of twos, threes and fours all over the Chamber, discussing the unexpected report. Patterson, who at the time the report was made occupied Hamilton's seat, between Cephising and Howe, bowed his head and for five or ten minutes he was in conversation with Howe He looked flushed and excited Harlan went at once to the Clerk's desk and for fifteen or twenty minutes was carefully reading the report, taking notes from it When he was done with it Patterson, who had returned to his seat, sent for the report and read it apparently with great care A correspondent says the report will put an end to all hope of escape of an extra session of Congress. SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 1 1873

Statue of Baker

On the 11th instant the bill introduced into Congress by Senator Cole of California to provide for a life size statue in marble of Gen E D Baker was reported adversely by the Committee on Library to whom it had been referred The report of the Committee is as follows

The joint Committee on the Library to whom was referred House bill No 2 762 entitled An act providing for the erection of a statue in marble of the late Senator Edward Dickinson Baker have attentively considered the same and report that the proposition is that the Congress of the United States shall provide a marble statue of one of its late members to be placed in the national Capitol

The hesitation to recommend a favorable consideration of the measure the committee desire to state arises from no lack of appreciation of the character and services of the eloquent and patriotic, of the late distinguished man the subject of it

The instances are believed to be rare and exceptional where a legislative body has sought to commemorate its associates living or dead by the production of their effigies in sculpture or painting to be displayed on the theater of their common action The novelty of such a proposal could not fail to elicit remark were the propriety and expediency less questionable

If this were not so an embarrassment quite insurmountable must needs be encountered in any attempt to perpetuate such a practice The obvious difficulty of determining where to begin would only be less than where to end as the latter would devolve upon those who come after

Once entered upon it is not perceived that limitations could well be prescribed or enforced and so the work of multiplying images of departed members must go on defying alike all distinction of pre-eminence and ending only with the capacity of the Capitol to contain more

When the report was read Colonel of California and Corbett of Oregon urged the propriety of the passage of the bill notwithstanding the adverse report of the committee They took the reasonable view that the case of Senator Baker was an anomalous one, and, as it had no parallel in the past history of the country was not likely to have one in the future This ought to be considered a sufficient answer to the objection of the committee There would be no occasion in the future for making this case a precedent for there would never occur a case that could claim the right to be placed upon the same footing with it Baker was a soldier in the Mexican war and when the rebellion broke out he was one of the first to step forward and offer his services to his country While a Senator, he commanded as Colonel of a regiment of the Union army being in the field all the time during the recess of the Senate and when that body was in session, only being present when there appeared to be a demand for his vote and for the power of his matchless eloquence in carrying through those high measures which were required by the stern exigencies of the hour for the preservation of the Government He gave the remainder of his time to service in the field, He was commanding as a Colonel when he fell, but had then in his possession a Brigadier General s commission

It would certainly be a fitting tribute to the memory of one who sacrificed his life upon the altar of his country to give him this statue And no one need fear that other members of the Senate, or their friends when they shall have passed away, would regard this as a precedent for claiming similar honors,

On the 12th instant a bill passed the Senate (having already passed the House) to relieve scientific institutions from the revenue tax upon alcohol used by them for scientific experiment and illustration The bill provides that the Secretary of the Treasury may grant permits to incorporated or chartered scientific institutions or colleges of learning to withdraw alcohol in specified quantities from bond without paying the internal revenue tax on the same, or on the spirits from which the alcohol has been distilled, for the sole and exclusive purpose of preserving specimens of anatomy, physiology, or of natural history belonging to such institutions or for use in any chemical laboratory of such institutions, but application for permits is to be made by the Presidents or Curators of such institutions, who are to file a bond for double the amount of the tax on the alcohol to be withdrawn, with two good and sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and conditioned that the whole quantity so withdrawn from bond shall be used for the purposes specified, and for no other, and that the Presidents or Curators shall comply with such other requirements and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and if any alcohol so obtained shall be used by any officer of such institution for any purpose other than that specified, then the officers or sureties are to pay the tax on the whole amount of alcohol withdrawn from bond, together with a like amount as a penalty in addition thereto

On the 12th of February the Senate Committee on Judiciary reported back with amendments the bill referred to them providing for the better protection of the Government against smuggling One of its provisions with suitable penalties, is that Collectors of Customs shall give their attention to the business of their offices, and shall when they have cause to believe any smuggling has been done investigate the matter carefully ascertain the facts and report the same within ten days, together with the names of the witnesses, and what particular provision of the law has been violated, to the United States District Attorney, to enable that officer to institute the requisite legal proceedings in the premises This bill ought to pass If our rent reports are true there is occasion for its application to the port of Portland

The Herald rising above its party allegiance gives vent to the following virtuous spasm

> We have no political prejudice to nourish in considering the Credit Mobilier corruption If it be demonstrated by the evidence that James Brooks—A man whom the Democracy once delighted to honor—has ' touched pitch and been defiled,' we cordially hope that he will be kicked out with the rest of the ring

The 'rest of the ring " referred to as appears from other parts of the Herald s article are the other Congressmen accused of corruption Those are condemned outright while Brooks, whose case is exceptionally dark, is treated with a gentle If This is getting above ' political prejudice with him

Among the liveliest articles in Lippincott s Magazine is a paper entitled "A Visit to the King of Aurora, translated from the German of Theodore Kirchoff The ' Aurora mentioned is our own ' Dutchtown, ' famous for good meals and homely virtues, and the "King ' is, of course, the venerable and respected Dr Keil Mr Kirchoff with whose pleasant productions, both in prose and poetry many of our German speaking readers are doubtless familiar visited the German colony at Aurora in September, and gives in this paper his observations and impressions of the social status of the colony.

English orators have been too much accustomed to the use of a peculiar badinage, a certain superciliousness of tone in dealing with the Alabama question The dignity of the Government the sacrifice of national honor, and the one sided and humiliating terms of the Geneva arbitration have been themes fruitful of expressions of haughty disdain towards America Perhaps Brother Jonathan s tough epidermis of good nature or conscious superiority has never been pierced by these keen shafts Certainly no cry of suffering has ever escaped his lips

The speech of Mr Bernal Osborn in the English Parliament on the Queen s address is a refreshing change from the stale diet of the Commons ordinary declamation Mr Osborne condemned the arbitration, but believed the less said about it the better Any outlay which secured the good will of America was a profitable investment The tone of this brief extract is to be commended, not so much because it betrays a consciousness that the ill will of America is something to be shunned but rather because there is some trace of a sentiment of international politeness without which there can be no lasting friendship between the two peoples

The Boston Advertiser makes mention of a grand plan for the apprehension of villainy in high places, and the speedy accomplishment of national salvation from the thraldom of all shapes of Credit Mobilier The enterprising individual who has thus laid himself liable to immortal fame rejoices in the verdant cognomen of Green, Benjamin E The modest prospectus whereby his plan has been advertised to a grateful country, offers to sell at a low rate leaving a large margin for profits a portion of 37 000 shares of Credit Mobilier originally taken by Duff Green to be placed in Europe from the proceeds of which a fund will be raised to pay the legal expenses of prosecuting and recovering from Ames and Alley all that the Credit Mobilier made out of the Union Pacific Railway With a singular foresight, born of faith in the ' twigging' powers of the average Congressman, perhaps, Mr Green first placed this glowing prospectus on the desks of Representatives Mr Green claims to be the Secretary of the trust and only genuine company Thus far members have declined to invest

The New York Herald of February 17th says The Modoc Peace Commissioners have arrived in the neighborhood of Captain Jack s stronghold and organized for business They have encountered however, a serious obstacle in the protest of the Governor of Oregon, who holds that no peace should be made with the Modocs until those of the number who murdered eighteen citizens of his State some time since, are given up to be dealt with by the civil powers, and, further, that as Lost river is a part of the State of Oregon, it cannot be reserved by the General Government for the use of the Modocs, We are informed by our special correspondent with the Commissioners that the Governor s protest was 'laid on the table,' but it cannot be allowed to remain there. The rights of the people of Oregon must not be trodden upon even to please the benevolent friends of the Modoc savages " The New York Herald is the only one of our Eastern exchanges that has grasped the Modoc question with anything like a clear comprehension of the facts

Salt Lake dispatches of recent date speak of the organization of an ecclesiastical Credit Mobilier within the Mormon Church Large sums of money have been raised by the Apostles for the avowed purpose of influencing the Government to "let Utah alone ' Delegate Hooper is working actively, although the Mormon dignitaries express their disappointment at the feeble reply he made to Claggett s powerful arraignment of the hierarchy of blood Hooper says that no money has been tendered any Senator or Congressman in the shape of a bribe, although he does not deny that certain prominent newspaper men have been liberally subsidized The immense reserve fund of the Church is accomplishing something in the way of purchasing influence in various quarters Mormons claim that Senators Morton, Conkling and Carpenter prefer the appointment of a Commission to investigate and report upon Utah affairs, to the more stringent measures contemplated by the Frelinghuysen bill

Congress is asked to appropriate $1 000 000 for headstones for our national cemeteries The Washington Chronicle says that a few days ago there were in Washington upwards of one hundred gentlemen representing various quarries and establishments for the manufacture and cutting of stone, all anxiously awaiting the action of Congress on a bill making provision for such headstones A queer subject for men to speculate in' The bill referred to provides that the headstones "shall be of durable material, and of such design and weight as shall keep them in place when set, and that the contract for supplying the same shall be awarded by the Secretary of War to some responsible person whose sample and bid shall in the greatest measure, combine durability, decency and cheapness '

The old Houston street brick church (Presbyterian) in New York city fell with a fearful crash on Sunday, February 16th The audience in attendance on the morning service had but just left the church where, singular by enough the pastor preached from the text, 'Escape for thy life The building was erected about 35 years ago for Dr Burchard and has always been considered a strong, substantial building Rev W W Gage is the present pastor For some time the roof had been in a leaking condition some of the beams had rotted away and the heavy weight of snow caused them to break thus forming the walls and front side out The loss is about $30 000

George Sand asserts that Napoleon III was "neither a monster nor an idiot, and that France would never have submitted to be ruled by a crétin She says the Emperor failed because he felt he was seen through, 'weighed in the balances and found wanting and because he ' lost confidence in his star—his illusion—himself He was a breakdown since the death of his brains carrier, Duc de Morny His failings are traced to his surroundings—not himself

The Washington Chronicle of the 11th inst says The Secretary of War has informed the House, in accordance with a resolution of that body that the Government has paid the Union Pacific Railway Company for transportation of troops, freights, &c, since June 30 1866 $3 351 039 65 Payment has been made, one half in cash, and one half credited on bonds '

The Idaho World says We have had some heavy snow storms during the past week, and owners of buildings have been kept busily at work shoveling it off roofs and sheds On the flat of Elk creek, near town, the snow lies to the depth of thirty eight inches, while on Deer and Pine creeks we are informed it is over five feet deep There is more snow around Idaho city now than there was at this time last winter, and we therefore infer that it is also deeper in the mountains All that we now require to assure us of a most prosperous mining season, is an early break up of winter.

The following, a sample of thrift on Puget Sound, is from the Olympia Tribune "Six months ago three French Canadians, all industrious and frugal men of experience, invested $1,500 of their earnings in cattle, land and logging utensils and equipments Going to work vigorously to work at their camp in Mason county, these men have since cut and sold two million feet of choice saw logs This morning they were in Olympia and we learned from them the result of their fall and winter s work They have lived well during that time, and, besides clearing their camp equipment, equivalent as we said before, to $1,000, have made $1,200 apiece, or a total of $5,100 They still have their camp, and their little piece of land has on it yet fully another million feet of logs "

The Olympia Tribune says "Tacoma is still after the terminus, and its prospects are said to be as good as any of its lower Sound rivals, and second only to those of Olympia The land company represented by Colonel M M McCarver, are still grabbing every acre they can get, and paying better and better prices for it They have money, and are spending it to secure their end Last Saturday they concluded a purchase of Mr Miles Gallagher of this city, of 700 acres owned by him in that neighborhood paying him the snug little sum of $6 000 therefor A week or ten days previous the same parties paid Mr Stephen Judson a similar large sum for a tract of land owned by him there Altogether this company have over 4 000 acres of wild land at that place with a water front of four miles on Commencement Bay, and are prepared to offer the Northern Pacific Railroad Company handsomely for the advantages of the terminus "

The main features of the new bill to aid in the construction of the Portland, Dalles and Salt Lake Railway, are thus stated by Pacific in the Washington Chronicle of February 7th

First Instead of granting lands to the company they are to be sold by the Government to actual settlers and a portion of the proceeds applied in aid of the construction of the road

Second. The proceeds are not to be paid over to the company but invested in United States bonds with which to redeem the first mortgage construction bonds as the road shall be completed not exceeding $25 000 per mile as the proceeds shall arise from sales

Third The construction bonds before being disposed of s all be indorsed by the Secretary of the Interior indicating briefly the nature of the security for their redemption

Fourth. Running connections may be formed with other roads

Fifth All the rights granted by the bill are conditioned upon the construction of a first class railroad and telegraph—to be commenced within one year, and 20 miles completed annually

Sixth On the line between the Union and Central Pacific roads and the Columbia river, about 588 miles in length, the United States mails, troops army and Indian supplies are to be transported for the period of five years free of charges, the transportation of the mails alone now costing about $240,000 per year

Seventh On the completion of the portage links of railroad at the Cascades and Dalles of the Columbia one four and the other fourteen miles in length the like governmental service is to be performed on that river at 50 per cent less than the present charges Here the Government is paying about $30 000 per annum for carrying the mails alone

SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 1, 1873

CITY.

GEMS OF ART.—This title may with entire truthfulness be applied to the superb chromos, Wide Awake and Fast Asleep, which are given to each annual subscriber to the Christian Union, Henry Ward Beecher's paper, published in New York. As specimens of the chromo-lithographic art we have been unable to find anything in the picture galleries of our best stores which ex cel them in interest or beauty. Another picture, a splendid French oleograph, beautifully entitled, Little Runaway and Her Pets, is also furnished by the publisher of the Union as a premium. The two former, or the latter, will be given to each subscriber for the paper at $3. Those pictures are really worth the full price of the subscription, and in addition the subscriber gets a genuine live Christian newspaper, employing some of the best talent of the country in addition to the great Beecher. Mr. E. F. Heroy, who is agent for the Union, can be found at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association in this city, where it would pay those who love art in perfection and good substantial reading, to call on him, see the pictures and subscribe for the paper. The circulation of Mr. Beecher's paper is over 140,000.

SMALL ENGINES.—We observed yesterday a pair of miniature steam engines, on the Vancouver, which were brought over to this city some months since for sale. These engines were made years ago by Major Rees, of Vancouver, when that gentleman was serving an apprenticeship as a machinist. They are placed on a platform with all the steam jointing and gearing attached, including a fly wheel. At one side of the platform is a lever which connects with the gearing by which the motion of the engine can be reversed at pleasure. The cylinders are of about two inch bore, and admit of one foot stroke. These engines are perfect little beauties, and would doubtless be of much service in driving light machinery, such as a light sewing machine, churn, etc.

DESERTING SAILORS.—Under the new law relating to seamen, the U. S. District Attorney is making it decidedly interesting for sailors who are of a mutinous turn of mind, or who are troubled with deserting propensities. On Tuesday three were placed under arrest, two for desertion, and one for disobedience of orders. The law, however, is certain, but slow. These irrepressible sons of Neptune are much disposed to snap their digits at the law, and brave the consequences of its violation. The fact is, these sailors desert from the ships faster than it is possible to try them. On Thursday night, three more escaped from the vessels now in port, under friendly cover of darkness; and have not been heard of since.

THE OLD CABLE.—The steamer Mary Bell was engaged yesterday in grappling for the old telegraph cable which was broken over a month ago. This cable was stretched from the rear of the telegraph office to the foot of I street on the east side. About 400 feet of the western end of the cable was secured, but the western end was allowed to remain until the water fell. It was this portion of the severed cable that the steamer was endeavoring to secure. The wind was so high that a greater portion of the day was spent in fruitless endeavors to draw the cable clear of the bank. What degree of success has attended the efforts of the steamer thus far made we are unable to state.

SENT TO JAIL.—Four boys—Dale, McGuire, McMillan, and Mann—were arraigned yesterday morning in the Police Court on several charges of larceny. The boys entered a plea of guilty to most of the charges and were sentenced by the Court according to the degree of the offence. Dale was sentenced to the county jail for two months on one charge, and one month on another, making three months in all. McGuire, McMillan and Mann were each sentenced to the county jail for one month on charges of larceny.

ANOTHER STEAMER.—About the first of July it is the intention of N. H. Lane, Esq., to commence the construction of a steamboat to ply on the waters of the upper Willamet. The boat will be nearly equal in dimensions to the Governor Grover—lacking only 5 feet in the length and 4 feet in width of being as large. The machinery will be of the same size and power as that boat. No cabin will be constructed, nor passenger accommodations; the boat being built expressly for conveying freight up and down the river.

LENT.—The services in the Cathedral Church on Ash Wednesday were impressive and solemn, and attended by an unusually large number of the faithful, who thronged to the foot of the altar to receive the blessed ashes upon their foreheads. The evening services were largely attended. Archbishop Blanchet gave the instruction in the evening, and Rev. J. F. Fierons, V. G., addressed a few appropriate remarks to the people in the morning.

FOR ARRAIGNMENT.—The U. S. District Court will convene to day at one o'clock. By order of the Court, that hour was set for the arraignment of the two deserters now in custody of the Marshal and held to appear. Chas. Wilson and John Corcoran. The specific charge preferred against these defendants is, that they refused and failed to join the ship after having signed articles to that effect, and received an advance.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.—Next Thursday evening, 6th inst., the Father Mathew T. A. B. Society will hold its regular monthly meeting. This society is reported to be in a prosperous condition, increasing in membership every meeting. Their meetings are made interesting by little speeches from different members, encouraging each other in their labor of reform.

ASSESSMENT ROLL.—Three assessment rolls for 1873, have recently been finished by order of the County Clerk. These books are a decided improvement over those of preceding years. Each page is so ruled as to enable the Assessor to classify much more accurately the different kinds of property taxed, and thus save that officer time, labor and trouble.

MUSICIAN DEAD.—We learn that Mr. Lledner, the leader of the U. S. 25d Infantry band, died at Fort Whipple, Arizona, on the 6th of February, of heart disease. Mr. Lledner was well known in this city, having been stationed with the band here for nearly two years. He was a competent and accomplished musician. Over a year ago he was ordered to Arizona with the band.

NO REPORTS.—At this date no reports have been received at the Superintendent's office from the following Districts: Nos. 1, 9, 11, 20, 23, 24, 26, 28, 29. As heretofore stated, the time expires March 31. The distribution of the county fund, according to the present law, takes place March 17th. A second distribution will be made in September.

PREPARING TO LOAD.—The bark Penang having been chartered, was drawn alongside Flanders' wharf, and preparations are being made to receive a cargo of wheat for Europe. A considerable quantity of lumber is deposited on the wharf, which will be used for lintage. The vessel will probably commence to receive wheat next week.

HELD TO ANSWER.—James McArdley was examined yesterday morning before U. S. Commissioner Wilcox. The defendant was arrested on Thursday on a charge preferred against him of willful disobedience of orders, and of generally mutinous conduct. He was held to answer by the Commissioner, and committed to jail.

TO PARTICIPATE.—We learn that the Hibernian Benevolent Society of Vancouver, Washington Territory, will come over to this city on the 17th inst., to participate in the celebration of St Patrick's Day. Delegations of Irish residents of Salem and other interior towns will also attend.

FOR BELGIUM.—The Rev. L. Dielman, of the Catholic Church, the pioneer missionary of the Blue mountains, arrived in this city from Eastern Oregon last week. He will take his departure for his native country, Belgium, on the steamer Ajax.

It does not weary the operator, paralyze the spine, break needles or get out of order, and makes a beautiful look stitch. The above testimony given by one of our patrons, who has used the Home Shuttle machine for three years.

BOARD OF DELEGATES.—A regular monthly meeting of the Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department will be held this evening at the Police Court room, commencing at 7:30 o'clock.

PREACHING.—Rev. E. J. Dawne will preach at the East Portland Council Chamber to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

RETURNED.—Rev. G. H. Atkinson, who has been absent for the past two weeks on the Sound, transacting missionary work, returned yesterday morning. He will deliver a sermon at the East Portland Congregational church to-morrow.

LARGE RAFT.—The steamer Mary Bell brought up a large raft of logs from some point down the river yesterday. These logs were for the upper sawmill.

PUGET SOUND MATTERS.

A gentleman residing in this city, who has just returned from a tour of observations to the Sound country, furnished me with the following notes of his travels:

For two years the people have, in part, depended upon the location of the N P R R. terminus. Now they look more to personal enterprise for their prosperity. The old story of reaping one's own hold to start the bird, applies here, where every one goes to work on his farm, or in his mill, or logging camp, or shop, the results will be the best for all concerned.

Olympia suffers some depression from its large hopes of R R connection, but the people bear the disappointment well. It is to be hoped that the bonds of land to the Railroad Company will induce them to build the branch R R to the town ere long, or else that the bonds will be given up, so that the people can build it. They have a source of wealth as well as a stimulus to industry in the water power at Tumwater. The river fall is over a hundred feet, which furnishes at least ten good powers, equal to a river ten times as large, with one fall of ten feet. The bay sets back to the fall, so that vessels can enter and load and go out at high tide. The town is extending towards the fall. Water works to supply the city are in course of construction at comparatively little cost. One item of business shows what rills of income may be opened. Nearly a million of hoop poles will be shipped this year, bringing a return of about $8,000. Government expenditures furnish a large income.

Steilacoom lives—shows some mark of improvement; Tacoma mill gives some life to business there.

Seattle ceased a year ago to rely on the R. R. Its trade with the mills and logging camps, the lumber shipments from its own mill, the coal shipments, and the farming interests that center there, constitute its present reliance. Sixteen hundred tons of coal were loaded upon three vessels last week and sent off. One hundred and fifty tons are taken from the mines per day, and brought to the shipping point on the cars. Two new mines have been discovered, one ten miles distant and one twenty, both easily accessible with R. R. and tram-ways. A dry dock has been proposed at the north part of the bay, and, possibly another mill. More speculation is giving way to real work. We learn that the mills elsewhere are busy. The settlements are slowly extending up the rivers and creeks. There are signs of moral and educational progress. Gardeners were at work on the 25th of February. Three inches of snow fell at Olympia on the 26th, but a boy was plowing near Castle Rock, on the Cowlitz, on the 27th. The stock looks well for the season.

AMUSEMENTS.

Stephen Mayhall, the "Poet Laborer," will give one of his interesting entertainments at Oro Fino Theater this evening.

The Juvenile Concert at the Central School building was very largely attended last evening by the children of the schools and their parents and friends. It appeared from the attendance, that notwithstanding the attempts made to throw cold water on the affair, there are a very large number of our best citizens who take a very decided interest in the matter of cultivating music in our schools. The singing was, of course, not equal to that of artists, but for the multitude of voices, the time was very excellent. The course of training which they have had has certainly been good, and a continuation of it will certainly produce very desirable results.

One of the largest and most fashionable of Portland audiences were present last evening at the new Masonic Hall, on the occasion of the farewell concert tendered Miss Eugenie Rosenheim by the many friends of that talented young musician. We are unable to particularize for want of space, but will say that the performance was first class—both vocal and instrumental. The first part of the entertainment consisted of "Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn) by the orchestra, composed of Messrs. Brenner, Frank, Harris, Fink, Hegele, Bray and DePrang; vocal duet, "See the Pale Moon," (Campana) by Mrs. DePrang and Dr. Hatch; vocal solo, "In Foleola," (Verdi) by Mr. P. Richter; violin solo, "Fantasio," (Lucia de Lammermoor) Mr. Frank; vocal solo, "Judith," Miss Rosenheim; instrumental trio, "Ballo in Maschera," (Verdi) Miss Rosenheim, Messrs. Harris and DePrang. Part Second—"Overture to Zampa," (Herold) by the orchestra; vocal duet, "Home to our Mountains," (Verdi) Miss Rosenheim and Mrs. Gilbert; "Grand March from Tannhauser," (Wagner) two pianos—eight hands—Messrs. Brenner, Harris, Frank and Fink; vocal solo, "The Merry Zingara," (Balfe) Mrs. Gilbert; Piano Solo "Alice," (Ascher) Miss Rosenheim; "To Avani," (Gungl) by orchestra. Each performance met with a hearty applause, and encores were frequent. The concert was one of the most substantial affairs of the season. The benefactory—Miss Rosenheim—will, we learn, start for Europe in a short time for the purpose of completing her musical education.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

CIRCUIT COURT—DEADY, J.

PERSONAL.

Rev. F. C. Ambridge of H. B. M.'s ship Scout is at the Cosmopolitan.

J. D. Merryman Esq., of Hillsboro, was registered at the Occidental last evening.

Geo. L. Greathouse Esq., Traveling agent for Wells, Fargo & Co., has returned to the city with his family. He intends locating here permanently.

Allen Parker Esq., Sheriff of Linn county, Col C. N. Terry, of Salem, Dr. J. R. Bayley of Corvallis, R. Howe of New York, are at the St. Charles.

W. R. Matthews, formerly of this city, has severed his connection with the St Helens Mill Company and established himself in the Oregon Produce business in San Francisco. His card will be found elsewhere.

SPECIAL CHURCH NOTICES.

The evening service of the Unitarian Church is omitted to-morrow.

Divine service will be held to-morrow at 3 o'clock P. M. in the German language at the basement of the First Presbyterian Church.

At the First Congregational Church Rev. J. D. Eaton will take for the subject of his morning's discourse, "Bitter Sweet." The communion service will be held in the evening at seven o'clock, and several new members will then be received into the church. Seats free at both services.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Mounsdorffer has received new styles of silk and cassimere hats. They are really handsome, and will be sure to meet with ready sale. Call to-day and select.

A. Ehman builds neat and substantial cottage houses, hard finished, for $650. Prices for story and a half and two story houses reasonable in proportion. Plans of houses on hand. Inquire at 105 Front street, opposite postoffice.

PRICES MARKED DOWN.—Polite and attentive clerks will be happy to wait upon customers who are desirous of procuring a No. 1 article of clothing at the most reasonable prices. You will find all these ideas carried out to the letter at the well known house of J. Kohn & Co. 91 Front street. Their stock is complete in every respect.

The Judgment of the Public

Doctors disagree. Each school of medicine has its own theories, and as these theories differ widely, it is clear that few if any of them can be right. But if medical men cannot agree upon any theory or system of practice, the public mind find no difficulty in agreeing as to notorious matters of fact. For instance, they have observed for many years that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters uniformly cure dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, biliousness, nervous debility, and many other diseases which the prescriptions of the pharmacopoeia do not and cannot cure; and they know, therefore, that there can be no mistake about it on this point they are firm and positive. They take their stand on incontrovertible facts, and they state to one another verbally, and sometimes by letter, what they know about relieving and preventing sickness with the standard vegetable tonic and alterative of America.

Here then, the invalid has a guarantee of value that can be relied upon, viz: the sober judgment of the public. After twenty years of observation and reflection, the American people pronounce Hostetter's Bitters the best invigorating and regulating medicine at their command, and give evidence of the faith that is in them by purchasing more of it than of any other advertised medicine manufactured on this continent. A large number of physicians, too, however much they may differ on other points in therapeutics, admit the extraordinary merits of the Bitters as a tonic and alterative, and recommend it as a preventive of malarious diseases, and as a remedy in intermittent and remittent fevers.

This wonderful vegetable restorative is the sheet-anchor of the feeble and debilitated. As a tonic and cordial for the aged and languid it has no equal among stomachics. As a remedy for the nervous weakness to which women are especially subject, it is superseding every other stimulant. In all climates, tropical, temperate or frigid, it acts as a specific in every species of disorder which undermines the bodily strength and breaks down the animal spirits.

My Lady's Favors.

You have not seen my Bessie? beauty Bess—
She is a shrew a very pretty shrew,
Cheeks like a blush rose leaf sweet eyes and lips
Belong to Bessie, and she knows it, too,
And it has taught her coquetry;
She will not be what I would be—
If I but was why then so is not she

If I am shy at Bessie, Bonnie Bess
She looks and laughs and is not shy at me
But if I show her that I am not shy
She glances down and very shy is she
There is naught not shy in flattery,
Will bid her be as I would be—
If I do so, why then so does not she

If I but smile at Bessie's beauty Bess
She sighs, turns she turns aside and seems sunless;
But if I seem smiles and go away
She comes with I sing, looks to beg a kiss
By coolness nor civility
Will bid her be as I would be—
If I ignore, why then so does not she

If I be dull my Bessie, beauty Bess
Will mock a sigh, and titter and be glad
If I be boisterous and very lively,
O very still is she and very sad
Big boldness nor meek modesty
Will bid her be as I am all be
If I would so, why then so would not she

And yet I love my Bessie bindle Bess,
And I shall ask a question if a day
If I ever ply I'll tell her woman a nay
Is but a yea so be it nay or yea,
Twill bid her be as I would be
So once I think we shall agree
As when I go to church why so will she

HIS FOLKS

HOW THE HINKLE SETTLED THEIR MATRIMONIAL DIFFICULTIES

"I can't stand it, and, what's more, I won't," said little Mrs Hinkle, clutching the bars of her uncomfortable old cage of a rocking chair.

Mr Hinkle placidly hung up his almanac and went out to sow the early peas. He could stand almost anything, and yet remain as serene as a cabbage-head—which, indeed, his wife often said he resembled. Laviny's tantrums troubled him about as much as a mosquito's buzzing would trouble an elephant; but he thought they were kind of wearing to her, and that she "came to quicker" alone. So he left her swinging herself seasick in the rocker and shuffled off to the garden with a hoe and a pint dipper of peas. At the gate he met Miss Niddlins.

"And how's your poor wife?" said she sniffing. She suffered with a chronic cold in the head, which gave her an extremely sympathetic manner.

"Able to be stirring, 'spose," said Mr. Hinkle, shuffling on his brown leather moccasins. Even a cabbage-head may be, as it usually is, ruffled inside, and deep in his slow-beating heart Mr Hinkle was annoyed at the sight of Miss Niddlins and the embroidered, bedticking bag which betokened a week's visit.

"Laviny's putchiky enough without being set on," said he, leaning on his hoe in the favorite attitude adopted by scare-crows. "Yes, I really think she is," he went on, weighing the proposition deliberately. "Not that I mind her being spry-tempered and spitting out at me. It's only a way she has, and comes of her enjoying such poor health. She'll cool down, but that old maid hain't any call to rile her," and here Mr Hinkle gave the hoe-handle a resentful poke, as if it personated the spinster aforesaid. Like many men not gifted in public speaking, he was much given to talking aloud when alone. Indoors, his wife claimed exclusive right of speech.

"And here I've stuck, like a dab of putty, from the day I married with Boniface," she was saying to Miss Niddlins. "I've had to walk on eggs, or his folks would be in my hair. They've had their remarks to make about all my doings, and, you may depend upon it, it grinds."

Mrs. Hinkle must have been ground very sharp indeed, judging by her cutting tongue.

"Poor thing!" groaned Miss Niddlins, using her handkerchief just then because it would produce the effect of pity.

"See how I was put upon this morning by his sister Phebe," said Mrs. Hinkle, moving the end of her nose rapidly back and forth with her fore-finger, as if she were playing on a Jew's-harp. "That woman had the impudence to twit me of neglecting Reuben, because I leave him to get his own supper sewing circle nights!"

"Don't tell me so!" sniffed Miss Niddlins. "Did Mr. Hinkle complain to her?"

"Catch him complaining!" cried Mrs. Hinkle; "he hasn't got spunk enough. Why he's no more grit than a hay-stack, and he's as set. I couldn't make him break with folks if I was to suffer. Wish I was single; then I wouldn't be nosed round by 'em. Now here your are, free to go when you please!"

Miss Niddlins sighed an affirmative. It was her peculiar trial that her relatives never opposed her going.

"If you was to separate, I suppose you've got enough to live on," suggested she cautiously.

Mrs Hinkle's rocker's arke itself into a full stop. She had often said thiny, Reuben must choose betwixt his folks and hers," that she would take herself off—" and so like, but to have a third person hint at a separation startled her.

"Well—yes," said she, hesitatingly. "I've got the property I brought with me when I was married. I won't deny but what Reuben has done the fair thing there, but then, if he'd been some men, he might have doubled it by this time. The long and short of it is, he's half asleep. I have to keep stirring him up, and, after all, he don't appreciate me."

"I believe it would wake him pretty thoroughly if you should leave him," returned Miss Niddlins. "He'd begin to realize what a smart wife he'd lost.

"He'd clutter the kitchen with his greasy harnesses, and camp down on the lounge in his boots—that's what he'd do—the minute I was off!" snapped Mrs. Hinkle.

"He couldn't manage without you, to save his life," declared Miss Niddlins, confidently. "He'd go down on his knees to you to get you back."

Mrs. Hinkle seemed flattered by the idea.

"A pretty figure he'd cut," laughed she, "fat as he is, and looking, you might say, as if he'd been blowed up in his clothes!"

"I'm sure I don't see how you can smile, situated as you are," said Miss Niddlins, showing symptoms of fresh cold.

"His folks have tried my soul out of me!" cried Mrs. Hinkle, hastily resuming her wrath, "and what's maddened the most has been to see Reuben take it so cool. That man hasn't any more nerves than a tub of lard! I wouldn't value jumping off the meeting-house steeple if I thought it would give him a start."

"Poor woman!" said Miss Niddlins, displaying the red silk handkerchief that might properly be called her badge of mourning. "It's your duty to yourself to go where you can take some peace of your life!"

"I don't feel clear," said Mrs Hinkle, as she settled the coffee for dinner, and thus ended their first conference.

But as Miss Niddlins spent that week, justifying Mr. Hinkle's apprehensions, she and Mrs. Hinkle had ample opportunities for renewing the discussion of the latter's grievances, till, from not feeling "clear," Mrs Hinkle, by the time her guest departed, came to feel, as she expressed it, "all in a muddle." Even her ox-eyed husband noticed something amiss with her.

"I wonder whether or no sage tea wouldn't be kind of quieting to Laviny," he reflected one morning as he jogged along to the village after turnip seed. "I hain't seen her so fractious since she had the neuralgy in her face. If she wasn't a poor sick creetur I don't know but I should get put out with her—I really don't," and Mr Hinkle lowered his voice to an awe-struck whisper as he gave utterance to his treasonous thought.

"His folks" lived in a sick headache-colored house at the Four corners, and his sister Phebe was hanging out clothes in the backyard as he drove up.

"Got any sage to spare?" cried Mr Hinkle, whoaing Dobbin.

"Mercy on us! is Laviny going to make cheese in mud time?" was Miss Phebe's answer.

"Tain't none of her doings," said Mr Hinkle, slowly, punishing the wheel with his whip-lash, "but she's in a terrible nervous way, and I think maybe she needs something soothing. What's good for her nerves?"

"I don't know, without it's a sound scolding," replied Miss Phebe, with her mouth full of clothes-pins.

"Now, sister, you're hard on Laviny," said Mr. Hinkle, in an injured tone. "She ain't tough, like what you be."

"Her temper is tough enough, but I'm united if you are, poor soul!" and Miss Phebe hunted for both sage and valerian, though inwardly persuaded that all the poppies in the world couldn't soothe Laviny when she once got 'set out.'

Meanwhile Mrs Laviny had been doing a furious forenoon's work, and, ready to drop from exhaustion, was just hanging up the mop after scrubbing the kitchen floor, when dear, blundering old Reuben scuffed across the threshold with his torn paper bags, seat tering, dried leaves like an autumn wind, and leaving muddy moccasin tracks at every step before those clumsy footprints Mrs Hinkle's feeble forbearance fled. The herbs her husband had trusted might prove a narcotic acted upon her as a powerful irritant.

"Reuben Hinkle!" said she, bracing her aching back against the pump, "how much longer do you think I'm going to wash floors for you to litter?"

"There, there' now don't fret," pleaded Reuben. "I'll sweep it up. You do putter round more an you're able that's fact. You know I'm ready and willing to hire a girl any day."

A girl smouching my paint!" cried Mrs Hinkle in wrath. "Put down the broom, Reuben, you've made tracks enough. Your folks shall never have that handle, that I spend your money on hired help."

"You're rather hard on 'em, Laviny," said Mr Hinkle, "they mean well by you. Here's Phebe now been and sent you something stilling. I told her what a fuzz your nerves had been in lately."

"So you've been running me down to your folks!" cried Mrs Hinkle, glaring at her husband. "After all I've stood from you, Reuben, it's too much."

Mr Hinkle was a mild man—mild as milk, but even the sweetest of milk will sometimes turn sour in a thunder storm, and oft recurring matrimonial tempests had had their effect upon him.

"I've always made excuses for you, Laviny, and tried my best to live peaceable," said he, slowly, "but I believe 'tain't in the power of mortal man to get along with you."

Then, in a state of great amazement at himself, he went out to untackle Dobbin and sow the turnip seed. Listening in vain for the dinner horn, he returned to the house half an hour past noon to find the fire out, his unlucky mind prints dried upon the floor, and his wife absent.

"Gone off in a huff to her sister Tripp's, I guess," said he, patiently setting out the Sunday remnants of beans. "I'd have hitched up if I'd have known she wanted to go. She wouldn't speak to me, I s'pose, 'cause I'd riled her. I hadn't oughter done it—that's a fact."

Having relieved his mind by this last confession, Mr Hinkle ate his dinner with an excellent appetite, and in due time his supper also, his wife not having appeared.

"I expect she calculates for me to go for her, and I'd better be off," said he, as he strained the milk with extreme care and deliberation, and by this means lot a slow stream trickle down the outside of the pail upon the spotless pantry floor. "Why, if there isn't Lyra Tripp now!" and as he spoke, in at the west door came his wife's brother-in-law, with an willing feet, as though goaded on by the spears of the setting sun behind him.

"Laviny isn't sick, I hope?" said Mr. Hinkle, anxiously.

"No, 'tain't that," replied Mr Tripp, twisting his forefinger under his collar, as if his cravat choked him—"'tain't that—but—"

"She's getting most out of patience waiting for me, I suppose," suggested the unsuspecting Reuben. "Well, I'd oughter gone afore, only the off ox broke through the fence, and—"

"Laviny says she won't come back," interrupted Mr Tripp, desperately, "for she's lived with you as long as she can stand it."

Mr. Hinkle flopped down like a starchless dicky.

"I might have knowed she couldn't bear what I do," groaned he. "This morning, when she was blowing of me, I spoke ha'sh to her, I don't see how I come to. But, Ezra, you don't think, now, she won't never come round?"

Mr Tripp muttered something about his sister-in-law being "pretty resolute," and turned away.

"I wish you'd carry over Laviny's cough medicine," said Mr. Hinkle, rousing himself. "Lord! to think of her hooking in the night, and me not hearing her! And, Ezra, I'd take it kindly of you if you'd step in in the morning and tell me how she rested."

Mr. Tripp consigned the bottle to his coat pocket, while Reuben, returning to the deserted kitchen, which already wore a masculine air, tilted his chair against the wall, and listened to the dirges of the frogs, or gave expression to his feelings by singing,

"As on some lonely building's top
The sparrow tells her moan
Far from the touts of joy and hope
I sit and grieve alone"

"A dreadful poor hand I should be to sit alone," commented he, as he shuffled about to fasten the windows. "Laviny is a master-woman for making things lively. Somehow I can't bear to look her out," and it is fact worthy of note that the faithful Reuben, for the first time in his married life, went to bed leaving the porch door unbolted.

If he had cherished a vague hope that his wife might steal home in the early morning, he certainly saw no traces of her ruling presence on rising. Instead, the abomination of desolation reigned.

"Seems s if I was just a frame work, with nothing inside," said the poor man, moving about the chaotic kitchen in a hushed manner, like a person at a funeral, "the path is all knocked out of me."

But notwithstanding this alarming internal condition, by dint of burning three fingers he succeeded in making a lumpy hasty-pudding for breakfast, and also a cup of coffee, which, by reason of the large amount of fish-skin that settled it, bore an unpleasant resemblance to shoe-dye. As he was sitting at this frugal repast his sister Phebe flounced in.

"Has Laviny left you, Reuben? It can't be."

Mr. Hinkle nodded his head solemnly, his mouth not being available just then as an organ of speech.

"The worst is her own," stormed Miss Phebe, raining a shower of hair-pins from her falling chignon. "I guess we shan't die on her account!"

This reflection seemed to convey no consolation to Mr. Hinkle.

"You never felt right toward Laviny," said he sorrowfully. "I don't lay this up against her, her clearing out, I blame it on Miss Niddlins. She always had a dreadful faculty for unsettling Laviny."

Miss Phebe had a contemptuous nose, turned upward at the end like a sled runner. It curled higher yet at this remark.

"I wish you had some of my spirit, Reuben Hinkle," said she, coiling her back hair with a rapid circular motion, as if she were winding herself up, "if you had, you wouldn't go nigh Laviny for one while. She's contrary, and depend upon it she'll be a great deal more apt to come back if you don't tease her. I'll keep house for you, so don't you be a mite concerned."

Mr Hinkle groaned in answer. As dough is without yeast, so was he without Laviny. "He needed her to keep him up," he said, pathetically, and though tortures would not have wrung from her the confession, it was equally true that Laviny needed him to keep her down. Some leaven is safest hidden in its three measures of meal. Certainly, in her husband's presence, Mrs Hinkle had been a patient Griselda compared to what she now was, freed from home restraints. She fretted and fumed in an explosive manner, raising an unwonted fermentation in the Tripp house hold. She hated his folks, she hated Reuben for not hating them, she hated herself for having borne their interference so long, and declared she had not had "the temper of a fly"—which, indeed, was quite true. But as the week wore on without bringing the coveted vision of her husband at her feet, the effervescence of her mood was fast subsiding, when the rumor that Miss Phebe was wielding her domestic sceptre agitated it anew. Pretty work it was, to be crowded out of her own home by his folks! She knew now why Reuben did not come. They had been setting him against her. What if he should never come? For the first time this thought intruded itself, and in her anguish she sought relief in the camphor bottle. What right had Phebe in her kitchen, solacing Reuben with delectable cookery, when he should have been hungering in solitude after his wife? She declared such conduct would provoke a saint, though she did not give her authority for this conviction. One thing was sure, Phebe should not have the washing of her tea-spoons, and without delay Mrs Hinkle sent a juvenile Tripp to remove these and other personal valuables, choosing the dinner hour for the errand, that the scenic effect might be greater. When Mr Hinkle was forced to stir his tea with a fork perhaps he would be in more haste to console his wife! The plan was well laid, but it failed in the execution through the tardiness of little Joe, who, having a woodchuck to attend to on the way did not reach his uncle's till the remains of the dinner lay cold on the pantry shelf, and Mr Hinkle was half a mile away at his afternoon plowing.

Miss Phebe sent the spoons obediently, inwardly resolved that Reuben should not know of this proof of "Laviny's rightness, for she was well aware that only her own repented assurances that Laviny would soften toward him if left to herself, had kept him passive thus far.

"Seems s if I wasn't doing the handsome thing not to go nigh her," he often said. "I wonder whether or no she ain't counting on my fetching her?"

"If she comes of her free will she'll be likely to stay put," Miss Phebe would answer, "but try to drive her, and you know what Laviny is."

Mr. Hinkle did know, unfortunately, and, knowing schooled himself to patient waiting.

Thus the days were on, and he plodded through the spring work, cheered a little in spite of himself by Miss Phebe's earnest efforts at making him comfortable, while Laviny mortified and then alarmed by his run appearance, worried herself into a course of exasperating sick headaches, and in every sense shut out the sunlight from the house of the Tripps. In the midst of paint scrubbing Mrs Tripp found no leisure to devote to her complaining sister, but left one of her children to wait upon her. Mrs Hinkle felt abused. When had Reuben been too busy to bathe her aching temples? Little Joe made her nervous as a witch, and one day she told him so, and a moment after had the satisfaction of hearing him say to his mother in the kitchen that he "couldn't get along with Aunt Laviny nohow."

Why, that was just what Reuben had said—Reuben, who had never spoken hastily to her in his life! Was she an uncomfortable person to live with?

"'Tain't in the power of mortal man to get along with you, Laviny." The words came back to her with startling force of a proof-text, and haunted her afterward continually.

It must have been in rhubarb time, for dandelion greens had gone by, when one morning little Joe rushed in with the terrible tidings that Uncle Reuben had fallen her chunk from a beam in the barn."

Mrs Hinkle tore the bandages from her head and started up.

"Where's my bonnet, Susan? I'm going home!"

"Maybe he isn't badly injured. Wait til we hear further," urged Mrs Tripp.

"I tell you I'm going home, Susan Tripp! Where's my bonnet?" snatching it by the string, Mrs Hinkle sprang into the wagon just vacated by her nephew, and drove away at a doctor's pace.

Little Joe turned a series of somersaults, and then lay writhing on the grass in a fit of uncontrollable giggling.

"Didn't aunt Laviny streak it?" shouted he. "And uncle Reuben wasn't hurt a mite, but she wouldn't let me tell her! Tee-hee-hee!"

Yet, though no bones were broken by the fall, it is a fact that Mr. Hinkle found his 200 pounds avoirdupois considerably shaken, and he was actually, according to his wife's prediction, "camping down on the lounge in his boots," when, opening his eyes, they rested on her frightened face in the doorway.

"Why, bless your heart! come right in Laviny," said he. And she went in and shut the door.

Five minutes afterward, as Miss Phebe lifted the latch, she heard her sister-in-law say:

"I know I have bothered you awfully, Reuben, but I do mean to live peaceably now, and put up with your folks."

And Reuben answered, heartily. "I haven't blamed you a bit, Laviny. I knowed 'twas Miss Niddlin's work. But after we'd lived together so long, she might have let us be till God divorced us."—Harper's Bazar

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial.

FRIDAY EVENING, Feb 28, 1873

Gold in New York to-day, 110
Portland Legal Tender rates, 87c buying.
Gold bars are quotable at 893 fine
Wheat in Liverpool—11s 7d@11s 10d club 12s 4d@12s 6d red

Since our review of yesterday we have made inquiry of several leading business men in the city and find that the financial condition of our home market is being relieved from the rate of tight times but very slowly. The increase in the amount of loanable funds readily accessible here seems to be but little increased, and though the market is worth a quarter, it is in great part attributed to a lessened demand. Concerning the general financial outlook, it is still fairly encouraging.

An exchange, in commenting on the defeat of the bill introduced by Senator Sherman looking to the resumption of specie payments by the Government says the nation is anxious to obtain some relief from the disturbances which are sure to occur whenever a measure is introduced in Congress of remedy defects in our financial system. Although resumption of specie payments is a thing most sincerely to be desired, it is questionable whether it can be carried into effect by automatic legislation. Thinkers all over the country are fast coming to the conclusion that resumption can only be effected by degrees and by natural process. The rise in currency value and the decrease in the gold premium during the past three years seem to furnish sufficient guarantees that the object will be accomplished within a reasonable period by simply refraining from legislative tinkering and letting it alone.

The telegraph informs us that Mr Boutwell has already issued several millions of the new five per cent bonds to replace the old six per cent five twenty bonds. It is thought that the Syndicate will be able to float the $300 000 000 of the new five per cents within one year.

At latest advices, the New York money market was easier and unsteady rates being 7 per cent. The January coupon and dividend disbursements were not as large as had been expected, and money was returning but slowly from interior points.

The San Francisco money market is working a little easier and with more regularity than for some months past. From the commencement of harvest to the close of January, there was more or less stringency, with difficult seasons of short respite; but there is now a probability of more abundant supplies until the requirements for the next harvest shall set in. Commercial business is active, necessitating the use of much money, even to the extent of the loanable funds on hand.

British demands for American gold has about ceased, as the expected requirements for German account have not been greated, and large amounts of coin and bullion have been concentrated in London, besides heavy shipments on the way from Australia.

Miscellaneous.

The Superior Court of the city of New York has lately rendered an important decision regarding payment by express companies for packages lost while being transported by them. Cases of the value of $400 were sent from New York to Pittsburg, by the American Merchants' Union Express Company and having failed to reach their destination suit was brought by the shippers for the recovery of the value. The Court held that $50 being the limit of damages as specified on the back of the receipts, in case of failure to specify the value of the goods shipped, Judge Monell ordered a verdict for this amount.

The stock of grain in New York on the 5th inst, according to the Shipping List, compares as follows with that at the same time last year:

	1872	1873
Wheat, bushels	3,061,200	865,000
Corn	564,400	3,196,000
Oats	2,291,800	850,000
Barley	282,500	461,000
Malt	86,500	173,000
Rye	431,000	20,000

On the 12th inst the following vessels were loading at New York for San Francisco: Black Hawk, Carrier Dove, Edith, Elisa McNeil, Golden Fleece, J. T. Foster, Roaring Sandra and Sunrise.

According to the New Bedford Whaleman's List, the aggregate number of American vessels engaged in the North Pacific fishery for the last nineteen years has been 1,942, and the aggregate quantity of oil taken was 1,374,842 barrels. The largest number of vessels engaged in any one year, was 232, in 1854, and the smallest number, 27, in 1872.

Puget Sound Shipping

The bark Oakland sailed Feb 25th from Port Madison, loaded with lumber for San Francisco.

The ship Tenasita de Alvarez sailed from Port Gamble on the 18th inst for Valparaiso.

The barkentine Harrison sailed from Seattle on Thursday last with a cargo of coal for San Francisco.

The bark Forest Queen, Captain Burns, arrived at Port Ludlow on the 26th inst from San Francisco.

The bark Dublin sailed from Seabeck for San Francisco on the 18th, twenty-six hundred dollars.

The bark Amethyst arrived at Bellingham Bay on the 13th inst where she took on a cargo of 800 tons of coal, and then sailed again for San Francisco on the 18th inst.

Home Produce Market

WHEAT—The quietness last noticed in our market is still prevailing, attributable chiefly to a lack of tonnage, the vessels here having their cargoes already insured. We quote $1 57½@1 60 per cental.

FLOUR—Standard brands of extra is quotable at $5 50 per barrel, outside and country brands $4 50@5 00 and superfine $4. Notwithstanding the decline in wheat prices flour rules firm.

OATS—With fair receipts we quote choice lots at 60@62½ cents per bushel.

BARLEY—Nominal quotations are furnished at $1 40@1 50 per 100 pounds, sacks included. No sales reported during the past few days.

HAY—Good timothy for which only there is any decided demand is quotable at $16@18 per ton. Wild oat at $8@10.

FEED—Bran is firm at $17@20 per ton; shorts $27 50@30 and chop at $26@28. The supply is well kept up.

POTATOES—Large lots are offering, and and sales are dull at our last quotations.

APPLES—The call for choice shipping stock remains dull; but the best is till command 90 cents and $1 well packed, including boxes. Other and inferior lots, without boxes, 60@75 per box.

ONIONS—The San Francisco market appears rather better and prices here remain quite firm at 2½@2¾ cents per pound.

BACON—We note no change whatever since our last report and still quote the range for Oregon cured at 11@12 cents per lb for sides, 9@10 for shoulders and 13½@15 for hams.

LARD—But few important transactions are noted and prices though ruling low, appear as firm as could be expected under the circumstances. We quote still at 11@13½ for tins and 10@11c in kegs.

BUTTER—Lots of inferior quality still in the market and prices for such very flat. Choice dairy scarce and high.

EGGS—A very fair supply is kept up, but not so much in excess of the demand as last week. Dealers pay about 20c per dozen.

Other than indicated in the above, we notice no important change in our dom stics produce to-day. The general receipts have been quite up to the average in fact they have rather increased over those of the first days of the week, if we except Wheat, which is now coming forward in diminished quantities. Trade under the local impulse is quiet, but still dealers seem in good hope of a fair amount of business during the spring months.

Markets

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb 28.—Flour—Jobbing rate for best brands of city extra has reduced to $5 87½. The Mabry will probably clear for Hongkong with 900 tons taken at $2 50 per ton freight. The Castlemorine will load for same market at $2 50 and steamer Cangoes $12 per ton. These three vessels will take 20,000 barrels out of the market.

Wheat—3 800 sacks shipping with free storage for season, $1 77½. Cannot be quoted above $1 80.

Barley—Dealers call $1 20 the minimum price of coast feed. Sale of 1,000 sacks bay brewing at $1 36.

Oats—300 sacks fair feed to choice milling sold in lots at $2 10 $2 20 and $2 25.

Corn—200 sacks yellow $1 20.

Hay—Extremes are $15@22.

Potatoes—200 sacks sweet 75c@$1. Supply nearly exhausted. 1800 sacks inferior Petaluma 62½ cents. 200 sacks in on Point Lobito brand, $1 35. We quote Humboldt at 1 65 $1.

Provisions—10 000 pounds California bacon 10¼ cents. 14 000 pounds do 11 cents. 20,000 pounds White's St Louis sugar cured hams without cover 14½. 30 days. 20 000 pounds Louis Phillips Chicago do covered private. 5 000 pounds Cincinnati hams sugar cured and covered, 14½. 30 days.
